PROFIL M

I help leaders deliver desired results!

I love to see people living and working energetically, productively and collaboratively. That's why I passionately help Executives and Managers overcome their productivity and engagement challenges, so that they can create and build high performance teams and organizations.

When helping my clients strengthen the results, I leverage my 30 years experience in marketing management roles as well as HR and Organization Development leader with various global companies such as Procter & Gamble, where I achieved several record sales and cultural change.

I facilitate every workshop with a focus on engaging participants and strengthening their mindset and competencies to unleash their full potential to deliver better performance and results. Following the principles of neuroscience and organization development theories, I adopt a participant-centered and systemic approach to achieve best practices, systems and results for people, business and organization development.
